HVCC's Student-Run Newspaper Was Used as a Political Battleground Between Struggling Powers on Campus

Bv: Ksenia Mahmud Editor in Chief

People in power all have the capacity to do unruly things to get their way, including gossiping, lying, mudslinging and straight bullying. This is especially true when there is a struggle between opposing sides who are both passionate about their beliefs.

Beyond the previous debacle regarding a disagreement and eventual disregard for a SUNY vaccine policy, HVCC President Roger Ramsammy has garnered a mixed reputation, with some vocal critics despite his awards, accolades, and overall success.

I am regretful that throughout the Fall 2022 semester, the Hudsonian Newspaper has been under pressure to continuously publish back-and-forth arguments on this particular matter. This publication's authenticity and reliability are in question because of the constant spam from both ends that we've given in to.

The Hudsonian editorial board was thoroughly uncomfortable publishing even the first two letters from Daniel O'Connor and Robert Whitaker. O'Connor's letter was the face of our first issue this semester

It should also be noted that two submissions after the first specifically demanded to be presented on the front page.

December 10, 2022 - McDonough Sports Complex vs Corning Community College Women's Basketball.

By: Evan Bonesteel Jr. Sports Editor

Hudson Valley women's basketball had an impressive win over Corning Community College defeating them 87-25. Hudson Valley took off in the 1st quarter and never looked back as they dropped 24 points in the first quarter to Corning's 6. Yvonne Boyd took the lead in the first quarter scoring 10 points, shooting 4 of 4 from the field and showing defensive prowess coming away with 5 steals. Boyd would go on to score 12 for the game and have 8 rebounds and 8 steals. Hudson Valley played smart on defense as they were able to force an astounding 43 turnovers leading to 56 points. The second, Third and fourth quarter were more of the same as the Vikings pressed their advantage with every player showing up on the offensive scoreboard by the end of the game and solid defense keeping the Red Barons to 11 or less points per quarter. Payton Graber would lead the team in points with 32 as well at 10 steals. Sidney Phillips came away with 18 points and 7 rebounds. Nya Ewans-Edmonds ended the game with 15 points and 4 rebounds. Hudson Valley Women's basketball will face of next against Herkimer on January 5th.

their integrity and ultimately reduces the severity of their claims. One thing they have been consistent about is alleging that those with differing opinions are lying and being misleading.

The faculty appears to want their names published only if a letter is written as a collective. While anonymity can be valuable when addressing delicate concerns in fear of retaliation, it comes off as gang-handed when a student's report on this matter is not backed up by any of the faculty's letters.

The Hudsonian Newspaper is independently run by the students and legally cannot be ordered to publish anything by faculty, administration nor even the advisors. While it's important to include all sides of a story so integrity is maintained, our publication will no longer publish back-and-forth letters to resemble a decorated Twitter thread.

As students that mainly range from 17-21 years old, a feeling of obligation is natural when our teachers and peers egg us in certain directions. We kindly ask that our publication not be used this way again.

Short Story "Ctrl + V"

By: Ed Yerdon Jr. Layout Editor

"Our methods indicate I w a complete lack of..." Jane pasted into her research paper.

Jane took a look at it again but she was really confused. "Where did the 'I w' come from?!?" she exclaimed out loud.

Jane copied the sentence again. She pointed her cursor where she wanted the text and clicked "Ctrl + V" to paste it.

"Our methods indicate a complete as m lack of..." came out when she pasted.

Jane was completely baffled. "How can this be possible?"

Puzzled, she attempted a third time. "Our methods urde indicate a complete lack of..."

Once again, without fail the computer added additional letters into her pasted text.

"How can this be?!?" she said. Then she noticed something completely odd.

This time the paste included a string of characters that were all together. "URDE" is what it said this time. This looked like the word "Urdu" but it wasn't spelled correctly for that.

She thought to herself, perhaps she needed to paste more to get more letters. Perhaps, these letters are spelling out a message?!?

She gathered all of the letters she had discovered so far. "I was murde".

Jane was so shocked that she jumped out of her seat! The computer lab on campus at her college library had never seen any excitement like this. However, nobody even turned to look at her.

She began pasting the same line again.

"Our methods indicate a complete red lack of..."

Sure enough, the word read as "murdered".

She began pasting over and over until no more letters appeared.

It said:

"I was murdered by Robert Johnson, in this library"

She called the police on her phone, although they would never believe her.

Hargreaves' most recent series, features visions of heroines that combine news accounts of disaster and environmental destruction with exaggerated (and humorous) scenes of female empowerment. Jessica Hargreave's exhibit opened with a reception on December 1, 2022, at the Teaching Gallery in the Administration Building. Attendees at the open included the art-President Ramsammy, and other high-ranking HVCC offi professors and students. While refreshments were served outside the gallery doors, most people were in the gallery taking in the fantastic artwork.

Most of the paintings on display in the gallery provide 3-dimensional images that meld with the frame. She begins her work by finding old, broken Victorian frames and repairing them using resin. She then mounts a wooden panel inside the frame and maps out an underpainting in acrylic paint. Using this underpainting, she uses resin to mold 3-D work on the frame and painting. Then she uses oil paint to create the detailed painting. The colors of the frame and painting mingle, creating a striking 3-D bridge between frame and painting that can only be fully appreciated by looking at the work in person. For the HVCC exhibit, she created resin items, including a chair, a lampshade, mirrors, and a screen. She then added wallpaper and fabric to make a furnished room.

Jessica's artistic inspiration is from Goya and Fragonard, who were known for their paintugs and for creat-their paintings and for creating furnished rooms.

Her style incorporates figurative and animal imagery, and allegory. She typically has animals roam the painting's frames and enter the picture.
Her work generally has been political, but this stepped into high gear after the 2016 election when she painted specific political current events. See the captions for more details on some of the paintings.

London-born and raised, Jessica Hargreaves moved to New York City in 1993 after receiving her Bachelor's degrees in French language and literature, and fashion and textile design. After working in New York City fashion design and illustration industries, she studied Painting and Drawing at The School of the Art Institute of Chicago, graduating with an MFA in 2006. She worked in New York City until recently. With several partners she opened the Mother-in-Law's art project space in southern Columbia County. She also makes jewelry for sale. The free HVCC exhibit is open through February 11th (see hours below.) I highly recommend attending Jessica Hargreaves' Artist Talk on February 2nd from 3 pm to 4 pm at the Bulmer Telecommunications Auditorium. The talk will feature her creative process and the meaning behind her paintings. For Our Loss Will Be Tremendous (After Benjamin Wests, "Death on a Pale Horse"), 2016. Oil on canvas. After the 2016 election, Jessica was so perturbed by the 2016 election results that she felt the need to express herself as quickly as possible. This and two other paintings on display do not use the Victorian frames and resin molding because it would have slowed down her work. This work, based on Benjamin Wests, in which four horsemen of the apocalypse - death, war, famine and pestilence ravage the earth, depicts Donald Trump and other political figures on the white horses.

Fuego Sorono: Talented New Band

Fuego Sorono's December 1, 2022, performance at the Bulmer Telecommunications Center Auditorium displayed its members' strong musical talents and the band's newness. The band is so new that it doesn't have a web page, though it does have a June 2022 YouTube post. It appears that the band has not played together much since, unlike the other Cultural Affairs Program performer that played from memory, the band had music stands, and members had to remind the drummer what rhythm was needed. While their stage presence was rough, Jason Ennis provided solid Spanish pronunciation of the pieces and informative background about the music and its origins.

However, once a musical number got going, the band members' impressive talent shone through the lack of polish. The band played Latin music from the 1930s, including Brazilian choros (Brazilian ragtime), Caribbean rhumbas and calypsos, and Bossa Novas. The band members included Jonathan Green on Clarinet,

Several of the band's musicians have played on the Fall 2022 BTC stage with other groups: Jonathan Green at the October 27th Hot Club of Saratoga 27th event and Brian Melik with the McKrells on November 17th. Each of its members demonstrated his versatile skills through individual improvisations on many of the pieces. Brian Melik seemed to enjoy surprising his band members with several unusual but appropriate percussion instrument selections and provided an impressive bongo solo.

I look forward to hearing the group perform again after they have had a chance to play together more and refine their stage presence.

Hudson Valley Community College Viking Men's Basketball Topples Red Barons 83-71

By: Evan BonesteelJr. Sports Editor

Hudson Valley Men's basket-ball took down number 8 Corning Community College 83-71. Hudson Valley showed strong play on both sides of the court with HVCC edging out Corning in rebounds and 2nd chance points which proved enough to topple the No. 8 Red Barons. The Vikings played team ball from start to finish as all 5 starters were in double digits for points with Jordan Belcher leading the team with 22 points. Belcher would also have 8 rebounds and a noticeable impact in the paint. The game was close at the end of the 1st half with the Vikings leading by 5. The second half saw the game slow a little bit with less shots from the field but shooting 51% from the field kept them ahead to edge out the Red Barons to the final 83-71. Trevor Green had a strong game showing up with 14 points and tied for leading the team with 11 rebounds. Eric Veidemanis and Kobi Wallace both came away with 12 points with Wallace tied for the lead with 11 rebounds as well. Rounding out the starting 5 was Damani Benjamin who ended the game with 10 points, 5 rebound and 5 steals. The Hudson Valley men's basketball will face off next against Rockland community college December 13th at 7 pm.
